Dear Sirs;

Public Response Re Abscam

I applaud your actions in the so called "Abscam" operations, and am sure the results will be a deterrent which will influence the attitude of our Federal legislators for the betterment of our country.

I am motivated to write this letter by the fact that the Senate proposes an investigation of the F.B.I. based on the request of a convicted criminal whom some of them referred to as a courageous hero!

The Senate should have had to complete it's censure/expulsion proceedings regardless of Senator Williams resignation so that we the public would know if they represented us or their own interests, as was being demonstrated by Senator Cranston. They sure got of the hook by Williams resignation!

Please keep up the good work, this country's biggest problem is the duplicity of our elected representatives and the apathy it causes amongst the general public, the "whats the use with crooks we have in government", syndrome.

Very Truly

Dear Mr. Webster, ^{Public Response} P. 111 and

This is just a short note to thank you and the F.B.I., for your work with Abscam. We need more, not less, monitoring of our elected officials. Private citizens have little chance, even with an informed and vocal press (media), to exercise any restraint on our legislators.

As a democrat, I'm ashamed of the attitude taken by our Senators from California - Alan Cranston. S. I. Hayakawa's attitude was not much better. For them to waste our money ^{1.5%} investigating an investigating specialist is ridiculous at best. Keep up the good work and feel free to show this letter to any of my legislators.

Dear Gordon

I read in the Union Leader today that you would have voted to expell Williams but was in favor of an investigation into the FBI's activities.

To me, I feel that every single one of you in the senate who vote for such an investigation are scared to death that their activities might be investigated by the FBI.

I am back of what the FBI did and maybe it will put a damper on being sure that each member of the senate watch their own personal dealings.

How come some senators go in with no visible wealth and leave millions? Because they know their way around.

Webster Defends FBI Conduct In Abscam Inquiry

William Freivogel
Post-Dispatch Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — William H. Webster, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, says the real use revealed by the Abscam investigation was not the bureau's undercover techniques but the political fund-raising used by persons who want bribe members of Congress.

Webster said in an interview Friday that he hoped that Congress would turn attention to fund-raising after it criticizes the FBI's conduct of Abscam. Webster's statements were his first detailed response to the criticism of the FBI heard last week as the Senate debated whether to expel Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J. Williams was convicted of Abscam offenses but resigned before a vote on expulsion could be taken.

Webster strongly defended the investigation, which led to convictions for seven members of Congress. He termed Abscam a "service to the nation."

"We've been hearing so much... hyperbole in the highly emotional situation this week," he said. "It tends to ignore the record that is in the court on all of these cases for everyone to review."

He compared the FBI's role in the Senate proceedings last week to that of "a defendant without counsel during all of these highly publicized charges." He said he could provide the Senate with answers to the charges. Senators announced after Williams resigned that they would investigate the FBI's conduct of Abscam.

Webster said he hoped that one of the regular committees that oversees the FBI would do the investigating. Setting up a special committee would be unfair, he said.

Once those hearings are completed, Webster would like to see Congress examine what he called the gray area in laws on campaign contributions.

"The real problem is the pervasive effort to corrupt congressmen through bogus campaign contributions in return for certain specific legislative activity," he said.

Webster said that he wanted to lift his comments on Abscam to prevent things from cooling down. Responding to criticism that Abscam was "sleazy," Webster said the operation was supposed to be just that.

"It was based on being sleazy," he said. "The sleaziness in part protected them," he said. Webster defended his decision for agents to offer a bribe to Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., despite the absence of any evidence that Pressler had engaged in wrongdoing.

Senators were particularly angered by a memorandum dated Nov. 7, 1979, in which Webster permitted Pressler to be substituted at the last minute for another member of Congress. Pressler refused to take the bribe when it was offered.

Webster said Friday that he had only about 30 minutes to make the decision. "I had to make a judgment call," Webster explained. "I could have said, 'Don't let him come until we know more.' They were saying it would arouse suspicion.

"So I said the system will protect him because it has to be clear that it is a criminal purpose and... no money was to pass until a criminal representation was made."

This is the reason, Webster said, that he wrote into the 1979 memo, "Try to be sure this new senator knows he is being paid (bribed)."

Webster acknowledged that the targets of the Abscam investigation were often in effect chosen by influence peddlers, who told undercover agents which politicians would accept money.

"We tried to confine it to those we had reason to suspect would engage in this kind of activity. In some cases that rested heavily on the reliability" of the the middleman.

The middleman "had brought us people who did the things we have seen on the tapes, and when he called and said, 'Mr. So-and-So would like to come,' we would try to check to see what else we knew. But we thought that was a pretty good reason itself since we had these mechanisms to protect whoever came."

Webster cited what he called a four-tier system of protection against entrapment.

First, the bureau tried to make its offer sleazy enough that only those predisposed to crime would accept.

Second, no payments were made "until a criminal representation was made." In other words, no payments were made until the legislator agreed to use his office for gain.

Third, prosecutors monitored nearly all of the meetings as they occurred. If a bribe offer were being made improperly, the prosecutors could call the undercover agents to set them straight.

his own use. Webster said he didn't think his supervision of the investigation should have been expected to turned up these allegations. And he noted that they might not be true.

Webster emphatically denied accusations by columnist Jack Anderson that the Justice Department had not pursued some of those whose names came up during Abscam, possibly because of their allegiance to President Jimmy Carter.

He said some of the criticism of his conduct investigation was contradictory. "We stop soon. We stopped too late. We went after people had no business going after. We did not go after that we should have gone after because of the and authority." Those statements simply

Third, prosecutors monitored nearly all of the meetings as they occurred. If a bribe offer were being made improperly, the prosecutors could call the undercover agents to set them straight.

And finally, all the tapes involving members of Congress were flown to Washington and reviewed by Webster and Justice Department officials.

"So we had a lot of checks in the system," Webster said. The only alternative, he said, was "not to do it at all."

"I would not like to see these techniques — which have application not only to public corruption but also organized crime, to foreign counterintelligence, to drugs — not like to see them impaired by some over-cautionary requirement that we have to go into court for a warrant."

Webster acknowledged that his supervision of the Abscam investigation did not uncover some allegations of abuses now coming to light. For example, he did not know that middleman Melvin Weinberg had coached Williams on how to boast about his influence.

Webster said he was concerned when he learned about the coaching incident. But he said that it had occurred relatively early in the investigation and that Weinberg had been instructed not to do it again.

He also noted that Williams testified at his criminal trial that Weinberg's coaching had not affected his behavior at the meeting.

Webster said he had not known about allegations that the undercover FBI agents had an improper relationship with Weinberg. Those allegations were made by Weinberg's wife in court documents filed in Williams' case. Mrs. Weinberg killed herself shortly afterward.

She maintained that one agent had accepted gifts of two fur coats from Weinberg. The agent has said the coats were collateral for a loan.

And she said that Weinberg slipped away from FBI agents long enough to pick up an illegal payment for contributions.

Webster said he had known that Abscam would be controversial. "Someone said to me that if you want to really draw fire, investigate a labor union or a member of Congress."

But he had not anticipated what he called "the lingering, recurring question" of "how did you select these targets?"

The Senate's Ethics Ordeal

The United States Senate's long ordeal over what to do about the misconduct of Democratic Sen. Harrison Williams of New Jersey has been ended by Mr. Williams' resignation from the Senate in the face of an almost certain vote to expel him. Although the resignation has spared senators the unpleasant duty of expelling a colleague who was convicted by a federal jury last May on bribery and conspiracy charges, it has not resolved the problem of what to do about the questionable methods of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The FBI brought about the conviction of Mr. Williams and six other members of Congress through its so-called Abscam investigation, in which the lawmakers were offered money and other inducements to do political favors for fictitious Arab sheiks.

Of highest immediate importance to the Senate, however, was the task of dealing with Mr. Williams' conduct. Although Sen. Williams steadfastly maintained that he had violated neither the criminal law nor Senate rules, the Senate Ethics Committee had unanimously concluded that, apart from his felony conviction, he had not abided by proper standards of Senate conduct. And that judgment was supported by the proven acceptance by the senator of a personal interest in a titanium mine that would have benefitted from Senate activity that he had promised an Abscam agent. That evidence refuted Mr. Williams' insistence through five days of Senate debate that he had done nothing worse than behave foolishly.

Although Sen. Williams offered an unpersuasive Senate defense and failed even to apologize for his shabby conduct, he at least performed the useful service of exacting from the Senate a pledge to investigate the FBI's questionable technique of setting traps baited with federal money to ensnare officials who have not been accused of crime. That practice, as we have said before, raises serious questions of public policy: How far should the FBI be allowed to go in artificially creating temptation? Should it be permitted at its own discretion to set up shop in the lobbies of Congress and offer multimillion-dollar payoffs to legislator-targets of its own choosing? Might an unscrupulous executive send FBI undercover squads to entrap its enemies in Congress?

After Watergate, those questions are not frivolous. They should concern any lawmaker who cares about invasion of privacy, entrapment and other potential abuses of the FBI's power. That power, used unscrupulously against the legislative branch, could raise problems of intrusion into the constitutional separation of powers. A portent on the issue is evident in Republican Sen. Larry Pressler's advertising of the fact that the FBI sent him a letter exonerating him of misconduct in the Abscam affair. Must certification of honesty by the FBI now be regarded as a badge of acceptability? However the Williams case comes out on appeal through the courts, the issues raised by it will remain to be examined and resolved by Congress.

Public Response RE: ABSCAM

Dear Sir,

I am so proud, of you and your Staff, that I just had to take pen in hand to interrupt your busy schedule.

I noticed in this morning's local newspaper, that the U.S. Senate continues to live in fear, of a thing called "Abscam".

It is my opinion that probably the greatest service your office has rendered to this nation in my lifetime is this thing called "ABSCAM".

If I might share a thought with you Sir, I suspect that long after you and I are dead and gone, those male prostitutes in high office will continue to re-examine their moral values, never knowing whether or not they might be our next victim!! Entrapment to me sounds like an educated word, like "Ooops! I got caught with my hand in the cookie jar".

If you have trouble understanding what I have said above, or it is not coherent, it is because of my over-exuberance and happiness in the function of your agency.

Senate panel probes charges against FBI in Abscam

Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The Senate created an eight-member committee Thursday to investigate charges by former Sen. Harrison Williams and others that the FBI abused its powers in the Abscam undercover operation. The four Democrats on the committee will be Sens. Daniel K. Inouye of Hawaii, who was Williams' chief defender in the Senate; Walter D. Huddleston of Kentucky; Dennis DeConcini of Arizona; and Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said he will probably name the four Republicans next week. Williams, a New Jersey Democrat, resigned March 11 in the face of almost certain Senate expulsion. He maintained that his conviction of Abscam bribery and conspiracy charges was the result of entrapment by the FBI. The Senate agreed to investigate the FBI's conduct in Abscam, which also resulted in the convictions of six House members.

How dare you?! You are obviously a man with a distorted definition of crime and the resulting punishment — at least when it comes to you being involved. You say you were "trapped." Yes, indeed you were, much like a robber in a stillwatch. The prisons are full of individuals caught in such operations, however, that does not make them or you any less guilty.

A Revolting Affair

To The Commercial Appeal:

I commend your editorial, "A Clean Get-away." Howard Baker lauding Harrison Williams' resignation as courageous — indeed — the FBI was the courageous department for beautifully doing its job. An exorbitant pension and excessive rights make the whole affair even more revolting. I trust the public will at least bear those shams in mind with upcoming elections.

Once you were informed of the nature of the meeting you attended with the phony oil sheik, you should have left — never to return. But no. You saw fit to continue this undignified activity, not once, or twice, but on several occasions, and offer your position and influence for money.

Now you're upset. You got caught. I say, "Bully for the FBI. A job well done." This is the only thing that haunts me: Since you have been in Congress 23 years, how many other opportunities similar to this one presented themselves to you and you benefited from them?

As I was growing up, I can remember doing things I knew I had no business doing, such as staying out past curfew, disobeying my parents, and I always got discovered. As I was receiving my punishment, I would plead with my mother — "But Mama, I didn't really mean to do it!" Her response was always the same, "Yes, you really did mean to do it, you just didn't mean to get caught." Truer words were never spoken.

I firmly believe this fits you like a tailor-made suit.

Dear Mr. Webster,

Congratulations on the Abcam cases. I have long contended that the U.S.A. has more real enemies in Washington, D.C. than in the rest of the world combined.

Few Americans understand that the foreign lobbyist, the influence peddler, the kick back artist, the crooked "defense" contractor and the bribe taker (and giver) are our real enemies! Many of them are "prestigious gentlemen" retired government officials, prominent law firms, "retired" high ranking military leaders working in collusion with the "defense" contractor.

I do not fear the farm boy from the Ukraine, the factory worker from Stalingrad, or the barefoot paupers of El Salvador or Vietnam. (All)

My fears for my country are of those who in their greed for big money destroy the nation by corruption. These enemies don't wear the red star, wave the red banner, or sing the Internationale, or carry an A. Kalashnikov 47. No, they wear a Brooks Bros pin stripe suit, often draw a huge government pay check or pension checks and then they become "Presidents" or "Vice Presidents" overnight for the, so called, "defense" contractor. No bribe take these sophisticated vipers, just a million dollars a year salary, but a million ⁶³⁻¹⁷⁵⁶¹⁻¹¹¹¹ for real defense.

Keep up the good work. At least the "department" knows where the tigers are hiding out in the jungle. Colonel Hyman Rucker could probably give you all the leads you can use to snare the vipers.

Cry For Politician's Scalp Scares One

By ROBERT GATELY

Man kind has a propensity for making mistakes. One advantage we have over other families in the animal kingdom is that we can think. Paradoxically, our ability to think is the very reason why we fail so often. But the survival of our species lies within our ability to reason, to learn from our mistakes.

The Abscam issue has brought us to a crossroad where we must avoid making a terrible mistake. Abscam has triggered a common response throughout the nation not seen since the early 1950's. I hear the cries to hang the corrupt politician all around me — from my neighbor, to my neighbors, to every member of my family. And it scares me.

I am afraid because I know that the universal cry to save our democracy from the 'pinko commies' 30 years ago did more to weaken than anything else. That whole era was a mistake. Yet those righteous rage that spurred McCarthy to go 'commie hunting' was preceded by yet another similar miscarriage of justice — the Salem witch hunts. We didn't see the connection then. But today can be different. BY THE FIFTEEN.

Today, crime surrounds us and quite a few times it has been allowed to flourish because of the misuse of political power. The desire to do away with crime is righteous. However, with history as our guide, we must conclude that the politician is not the enemy. Crime is.

A politician seems to be most vulnerable in succumbing to the dark side of human nature. We are consumed with indignation when an elected official is caught with his hand in the till. But we are opportunists. Politicians just have more opportunities.

What can happen if we do not show a careful pursuit to eliminate crime in the White House is what did happen during the McCarthy era. Imagine the FBI having a free hand in dealing with political wrong-doing. What if the FBI is given the power to go after any public official without cause or reason? This can happen. Our cries for justice and praise for catching thieves can make it happen.

It will not make any difference if a few innocent people who have borderline morality are hunted and ruined, not as long as a few criminals are caught in a trap every once in a while, rekindling our interest to have a corrupt-free democracy. All-right, so a few politicians suffer in this noble quest. War on crime is just like any other war. Or is it? Some people must suffer for the overall good of the cause. Or should THEY?

What if this pursuit for justice progresses elsewhere? Why not go after corporate heads since they can abuse power as much as politicians and with the same cancerous effect.

And what about religious people who are siphoning funds for personal gain? Let's go after them too. And the income-tax cheater who likes to exaggerate the truth. Or the shoplifter or, least of all the clandestine character who knows just what to say to a telephone operator to get a free call — let's get them all.

Make no mistake about it, this is a reasonable progression. Three decades ago similar cries for justice drew this kind of head hunting and led us to the point where no one was safe to speak their minds or write their views for fear of losing their jobs or their social status. It was a dark, dark time for us all. One we care not remember or repeat.

We are all capable of some kind of anti-social behavior, especially if small, planted temptations are flaunted in our face. Entrapment without cause or legitimate reason is not part of our democratic process. Just ask former United States Senator Williams.

Williams' behavior cannot be condoned. But if the reports are true that the FBI acted on the spur of the moment and without the slightest indication that the Senator was in any way predisposed to commit a crime' (Star Ledger, 3/14/62, Section 1, page 8), then the conduct of the FBI must be questioned, and checked.

We must go about this pursuit to reduce corruption at the top in a sane, non-destructive way. The upcoming Senate query (if it ever gets off the ground) into the FBI's methods of entrapment must be carried out with the intention of developing future standards which will justify having criminal investigations. Giving the FBI carte blanche with regards to deciding who are candidates for investigations will have disastrous consequences as history has shown us. Our pursuit of justice is a noble one, but it can not be instituted by a mass craze to erase a part of our nature that has taken over in a million years to develop.

We went full speed ahead with Abscam and caught a couple of crooks. All well and good. But the time has come to all back and reflect on what we have done and where we are going. We will march forward if we do not repeat history losing, if only temporarily, our basic freedoms to act and communicate creatively; and backwards if our actions force us to lock our doors out of fear and make us a nation of non-doers.

There are no demons, ghouls or witches in Washington. We just have men and women, some of whom misuse their elected power. Let's free ourselves of this kind of person. But let's make sure first that a malefactor's privacy before we intrude on it. A politician is not automatically a crook in spite of our cynical feelings to the contrary.

Mr. William Webster, Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
Washington, D.C. 20006

Dear Mr. Webster,

Recently, there has been a lot of comment regarding the role of the F.B.I. in the ABSCAM investigations.

I want to congratulate you and all the members of your bureau for the thorough job you did in the investigation and to express my gratitude, in particular, for making the public aware of the corruption involved, as well as bringing those connected with Abscam, to trial.

The comments that I read about, such as "investigating the conduct of the FBI"... is sheer nonsense; indeed, every member of your staff should be commended for a task well done.

Respectfully yours,

Re: Abscam Tapes and Transcripts

Dear Director Webster:

This is to advise that our office represents Mid-continent Broadcasting Company, which operates the KELO-Land television stations across the State of South Dakota. KELO is interested in obtaining a copy of all the videotapes, and any transcripts or notes thereof, taken during the so-called "Abscam" investigation which show Senator Larry Pressler of South Dakota. My client has confirmed with Senator Pressler that he has no objection to the release of the requested materials to our office.

Of course, we would expect to reimburse any reasonable expenses incurred in producing the requested copies. We presume that your office would have no difficulty approving this request, since the investigation is concluded so far as Senator Pressler is concerned.

Thank you for your consideration of this request. Please let me know if anything further is needed to support the request.

JOE ENLISTED IN THE FIRST MARYLAND REGIMENT, and was plainly a "rough" originally. As we passed along the hall we first saw him crouched near an open window, lustily singing "I'm a bold soldier boy", and observing the broad bandage over his eyes, I said:

"What's your name, my good fellow?"

"Joe, sir," he answered, "Joe Parsons".

"And what is the matter with you?"

"Blind, air, blind as a bat."

"In battle?"

"Yes, at Antietam; both eyes shot out at one clip." Poor Joe was in the front at Antietam Creek, and a bullet ball had passed directly through his eyes, across his face, destroying his sight forever. He was but 20 years old, but he was as happy as a lark!

"It is dreadful," I said.

"I'm very thankful I'm alive, air. It might ha' been worse, yer see," he continued. And then he told us his story:

"I was hit," he said, "and it knocked me down. I lay there all night, and the next day the fight was renewed. I could stand the pain, yer see, but the balls was flyin' all around, and I want-

WELCOME TO HARPERS FERRY AND BOLIVAR VISITORS!

After the difficult winter months it is a genuine pleasure to escape into the outdoors and wander around this truly historic area. Many of our visitors probably are not aware that this area includes two small towns: Harpers Ferry and Bolivar, sharing the same main street, postoffice, fire and ambulance services, water, etc.

You must visit the Lower Village and enjoy the restored portions maintained by the National Park Service. But by all means drive up the big hill and browse and shop among the many pleasant other attractions. PLEASE SEE OUR MAP ON ANOTHER PAGE. There are three points of entry ← onto Washington/High Street.

Antique shops, bank, barber shop, beauty shop, dentist, art galleries, restaurants, hotels, KOA campground, grocery stores, auto repair and wrecker service, gasoline stations, patchwork and quilting supplies, pewtermith, gift shops, etc. Above all, we have some of the friendliest folks you will meet anywhere.

So please come and visit us -- our map will tell you where we are --

"Hello!" says I.

"Hello yourself," says he.

"Who be yer? says I -- a rebel?"

"You're a Yankee," says he."

"'So I am' says I. 'What's the matter with you?"

"'Can't yer walk?"

"'No,' says he. 'Can't yer see?' I asked."

"'Yes."

"'Well,' says I, 'you're a ---- rebel, but will you do me a little favor?"

"'I will', says he, 'ef I ken."

So, after three days, I came down here with the wounded boys, where we're doin' pretty well, all things considered."

"'But you will never see the light again, my poor fellow," I suggested, sympathetically.

"'That's so," he answered glibly, "but I can't help it, you notice. I did my dooty -- got shot, pop in the eye -- an' that's my misfort'n, not my fault -- as the old man said of his blind hoss."

"'But -- 'I'm a bold soldier boy,' " he continued, cheerily renewing his song; and we left him in his singular merriment. Poor, sightless, unlucky, but stout-hearted Joe Parsons.

REBEL OFFICER KILLED IN NEW CREEK SKIRMISH

NEW CREEK, VA., Mar. 16, 1863--A brisk skirmish occurred here on March 14, in which one Confederate officer was killed. The following report was given of the incident:

"On Saturday night last, three Rebel soldiers of Bradley T. Johnson's regiment, were discovered at the stable of J. H. Carekadon, and after they had succeeded in taking therefrom the horses, were followed and fired on by two home guardsmen.

"After a spirited engagement of about 20 minutes the two citizens recovered the horses, killing a Lieut. Joseph G. W. Marriott, and severely, if not mortally, wounding the other two. Marriott was interred in the church graveyard near the scene of the action, where his friends may find his body if desired."

WASHINGTON STREET

HARPER'S FERRY, WEST VIRGINIA 25425

by Stanley K. Hadden, of Bolivar

THE FIRST THREE WORDS in the Preamble to the U. S. Constitution are: "WE, THE PEOPLE . . ."

The Constitution also states: "All legislative powers herein granted" are given only by the people.

Yet, our Congress repeatedly ignores the Constitution and sets rules of conduct for its club members . . . rules that enable a member of Congress to steal or do anything else that he/she wants . . . and go scot free.

FOR INSTANCE--Sen. Talmadge took $35,000 from his office expenses and expects to be richer by $700,000. He said "I did nothing wrong."

Congressman Richard Hanna took more than $200,000, admitted his guilt, and drew suspended sentence of 6 to 30 months.

Congressman Diggs was convicted on 11 counts of mail fraud and 18 counts of making false official statements in a $60,000 kickback scheme. He was re-elected to Congress.

HOWEVER--two youths stole fifty cents from a college student; they drew 2½ to 7 years jail. A woman citizen ate two strawberries in a supermarket and was sentenced to 6 months' probation and to work in the county park program.

Sen. Williams, most recently convicted by a jury OF CITIZENS and sentenced to jail in the Abscam exposure, was actually honored by his fellow members of Congress! I find that to be unbelievable and despicable: WORSE, the Senate now is raising all manner of Cain and clamors for their own investigation of the FBI. Senators claim they make their own rules . . . forgetting that "WE THE PEOPLE" grant them power.

I personally deny Congress the right to claim immunity from laws that I and mine must live by. I deny Congress the right to prohibit the FBI from looking into their activities. The Senator who said "it might happen to more of us" spoke the truth . . . but I strongly favor the FBI catching more of the rascals. I ask my Senators and Congressman to desist from such investigation and to provide more money for FBI.

The men and women of the FBI place their lives, daily, on the line to uphold the Constitution and to protect all citizens' lives and rights. Those members of Congress who now seek to prevent investigations of their own wrongdoings have, in my opinion, placed themselves above the laws under which I live. They have thus violated MY constitutional rights -- and I call upon any who will join in the mighty effort to insist that the FBI be instructed and financed to force Congress to live under our ONE LAW... the same law governing all citizens.

AN HONEST WORD IS BETTER THAN A CARELESS OATH.

SKIRMISHES REPORTED NEAR CHARLES TOWN

CHARLES TOWN, VA., Feb. 13, 1863--The Rebel cavalry led by R. W. Baylor attacked two Federal scouting parties yesterday near here and near Smithfield, resulting in brief engagements in both places.

Of the fighting, Brig. Gen. B. F. Kelley reported: "Yesterday about 1 p.m. a squad of R. W. Baylor's cavalry attacked a small scouting party of the 12th Pa Cavalry from Kearneysville, of 12 men, near Smithfield, killing 1, wounding 2, and capturing 4 men and several horses. About 4 p.m. my scouts from Harpers Ferry fell in with the same party a few miles south of Charles Town and after a running fight of several miles, recaptured our men and horses, and captured Lieut. George Baylor, 2 of his men and several horses."

Public Response re Abscam

Reference: The "Abscam" scandal

Dear Sir:

I read with incredulity in my local newspaper, your quoted statement that U.S. citizens want the FBI to continue with these types of operations! You must be receiving your feedback from your own staff! That is not my opinion or the opinion of, I believe, the majority of us mid-westerners. As a matter of fact, I have yet to speak to anyone in my sizeable circle of acquaintances, who supports the FBI's amoral, if not illegal, Abscam activities.

I hasten to add, however, that this is not in defense of shady Congressmen! Rather, it is simply to point out what should be a fairly obvious fact. That the proper and intended role of the Federal Bureau of Investigation should be exactly what its name implies - the investigation of federal crimes, not manufacturing crimes in order to entrap citizens!

As I have indicated to my three Congressional representatives via a copy of this letter, if you actually do entertain the mistaken assumption that Abscam was a proper function of your organization; then, perhaps, we should change the FBI programs to FBMCE (Federal Bureau of Manufactured Crimes and Entrapment)!

These types of operations and the fuzzy thinking of supposedly intelligent people who espouse them, absolutely horrify me! For it is diametrically opposed to our American ideals of justice and fair play!

We must not allow them to continue, for the implications inherent for all of us in this travesty are frightening.

Dear Sir:

Please find enclosed a copy of a letter that I have just mailed to Mr. William Webster, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It accurately expresses my opinion as to the improper role of the FBI in these types of operations (Abscam).

Manufacturing crimes is not the proper or intended role of a federal investigating agency! If Congressmen are subject to trial and conviction of FBI manufactured crimes; then, conversely, using identical logic, FBI agents involved should be subject to trial and conviction for the attempted bribery of Congressmen! Both ideas are asinine!

These amoral, if not illegal, FBI operations must be discontinued, the questionable integrity of a minority of Congressmen notwithstanding!

I read in today's Miami Herald of your answer to the criticism raised by Senator Cranston with respect to the ABSCAM situation. I hasten to tell you that, in my opinion, the overwhelming majority of Americans agree with the FBI's conduct, role and enormous dedication. I, frankly, think that Senator Cranston was way out of line and that he really and truly owes the FBI an apology. I thought his conduct and that of Senator Inouye was thoughtless and inappropriate.

I recall hearing you make a speech in Phoenix, Arizona, a couple of years ago dealing with the FBI's work. Morality or Legality? That Is the Question

OUTSIDE SOURCE

Public Exposure re Abscam

By DELPHINE BLACHOWICZ

Abscam flashed into our national consciousness several weeks ago and, like a giant nova, radiated brilliantly for a few days before expiring, presumably into the inter-galactic cold of the due process which Herald Price Fahringer commended to us in his op-ed article on March 2.

That no one has challenged Mr. Fahringer's thesis is an amazement to me and further repudiation in my mind of his belief that no charges should be exposed to the light of public scrutiny until "the law" has pursued its course.

The issue is not legalisms. The issue is the morality of those whom we choose to represent us. While we live under the best system of government yet devised by man, it is far from perfect, being "of the people" who, though possibly created in God's image, are not yet god-like in their actions.

This includes the cadre of lawyers who already wield far too much sway over our activities. That some of them are estimable gentlemen is not to be denied. Unfortunately, however, the converse is also true of a goodly number who are devoted not to justice and equality but to legalisms.

Legalisms such as "entrapment" which argue less for morality than for circumvention of the intent of the law and the ultimate good of the public as a whole. Thus, we cannot afford to consign the fate of our country solely to the jurists.

OUR GOVERNMENT is one of checks and balances. In addition to the three branches of government first conceived by the founding fathers, we have a fourth, the free press, to protect us from the other three. We need input from all, as each in itself and by itself, is imperfect. To deny the media access to events as they occur is to seriously impair the system of checks and balances which make us a nation of the freest people on this earth.

Whatever was behind the premature revelation of the Abscam investigation will not ultimately redound to the public's disadvantage except insofar that fewer have been implicated than would otherwise have been the case. Even with television tapes in hand showing subjects in flagrante delicto, those individuals will in all likelihood merely find themselves clever lawyers, cry entrapment, and get off with little more than censure from their colleagues, not necessarily for their actions per se but rather for their stupidity in not being more sophisticated in their rascality.

Without the occasional, albeit short-lived interest of the media, the public would have no basis upon which to consider the possible derelictions of their "servants" when determining who is to represent them come the next election day. The courts may rule but the people must speak. Better that they do so with too many rather than too few facts.

WHILE WE ARE IN DEBATE

ill-served by the superficiality of the media, we are even more ill-served by those for whom the law is their livelihood. The law in this country is presently so far divorced from justice and equality that were we to await the results of secret legal process virtually every individual with enough funds to buy legal talent clever enough to find sufficient precedents hinting at infringements upon his legal rights would escape due process and the public would never know of those instances in which justice was sacrificed upon the altar of technicalities.

Our nation would be even more in thrall to the machinations of attorneys whose dedication is too infrequently to what is right, preferring rather clever loopholes with which to seek exoneration for those of their clients capable of paying substantial fees.

Were this an ideal world in which those tutored in the law were dedicated first and foremost to the public weal, I would grant that those suspected of misconduct should be sheltered from the sometimes overzealous, sometimes erroneous, sometimes ill-conceived reporting of current events by the media.

But the press, despite its many shortcomings, remains our ultimate recourse, in part because the legal system is not serving us well enough.

I agree that the revelation of Abscam "has a destructive potential ten times that of Watergate." Why then do we hear little more of it? Might it be because the majority of legislators are themselves lawyers well skilled in finessing their own kind?

A HUE AND CRY has arisen, especially in incestuous Washington, against the FBI when for once that agency should have our gratitude for truly acting to preserve us against the double standards which exist for those who honor the old-fashioned morality which is the bedrock of the law and those who merely seek to manipulate it for their own ends.

Cover-up was Nixon's game, a game which almost destroyed our country. Granted the system worked, but would it have do so without the prodding of the press? Those who choose to live in the limelight should not seek the shadow of legalisms to protect any betrayal of public trust, be it in the form of temptation proffered or temptation enjoined.

Dear Mr. Webster:

I wish to congratulate you on the outstanding services performed by you and your department in the ABSCAM and BRILAB cases. All of my friends with whom I have discussed this matter feel the same as I do; that is, that you have indeed rendered a great service to our nation.

Certainly, members of Congress should pass a resolution commending you and your department rather than criticizing your actions as a few of them have.

Continue the good work.

Dear Sir:

Please let me say that you have my whole hearted support in the Abscam Sting Operation. Please do continue.

It has always been my opinion that the behavior of public officials as well as other white collar areas of society have a profound affect on the behavior and attitude of the rest of society.

The pardon of President Richard Nixon and his subsequent wealth was an advertised undisputable fact that crime in certain levels of society does pay, as a classic example.

Hooray! for Abscam, use it again whenever possible. Senator Cranston should be reminded that a Court, Jury and Judge found the defendents guilty!

The members of Congress are not above the law of the land, therefor, a Blue Ribbon Committee (?) is not needed to investigate a matter that has been legally settled.

President Jimmy Carter
c/o Mr. Chew
The White House

Dear Mr. President:

I think that the White House has been cleansed by the WATERGATE (supported by the Washington Post) and the Capital Hill has been cleansed by the ABSCAM (supported by the FBI). Though the judicial system also has to be cleansed (see comments from attached 10 clips), it cannot be done by a lonely small man like me.

Since my petition for a writ of certiorari was denied by the U.S. Supreme Court on 10/6/80, I have exhausted all my remedies within the courts or through other channels.

The Chief Justice has failed to keep his words as he said on 11/29/77 in London (see attached).

After having carried on a one-man crusade for justice for almost 1900 days, I come to believe that I have to be one of "many guys who go in with good intentions and they got blasted a couple times and every decent thought they had is gone", as Mr. William Greider wrote on "The Corrupt Politician: An American Perennial?" (Washington Post, 12/26/76).

It is not that I have lost confidence in the fight for justice, but perhaps I don't know how to fight. After my letter of 4/1/80 was sent to you, I received a letter of encouragement from Mr. Stephen Clark in the Dept. of Justice on 5/14/80. I tried and tried as he instructed. Even though the facts and the law support my position, no judge bothered to hear my case or to read my pleadings.

No one can fight a lonely war. Since you are the Commander-in-Chief not only for the soldiers who fight enemies aboard, but also for the civilians who fight evils here at home, I request your support. Through your support, the judicial system could also be cleansed.

As the Washington Post disclosed the WATERGATE findings and the FBI revealed the ABSCAM findings, so must you reveal the injustice suffered by men such as myself.

I urge your support in pursuit of "a more pure and more clean and more decent and more honesty than almost all governments" as you said at the CIA on 8/16/78.

Respectfully yours,

Public Response Re Abscam

You and your organization have been subjected to a great deal of criticism in connection with the Abscam investigation. It has been particularly interesting to read and hear the cries of "unfair" from our elected representatives.

Most people would have buckled under to the pressures by now, and I was encouraged to read of your firm position in this morning's Los Angeles Times. In a more perfect world, it would be unnecessary to keep tabs on people in high office; but as your people proved through Abscam, we have our imperfections.

Public Response RE: ABSCAM

Dear Mr. Webster:

I am a retired person (62 years old) who has lots of time to let public officials know how I feel, hence this letter.

I wish to commend you, and the Bureau, for the successful conclusion to the Abscam situation.

Unfortunately you have drawn a lot of criticism of your methods of the investigation of this case.

Senator Alan Cranston was one of the first on his feet to condemn President Nixon because a "bug" had been planted in Democratic Headquarters. At that time there were, probably, so many listening devices in Republican Headquarters you couldn't shift your gum from one side to the other without it being heard by Democrats! Now Senator Cranston is upset when we catch some real crooks from his side!

It is a deplorable fact that we now seem to have a large segment of our journalistic, judicial and Congressional members who seem to worry more about the criminal's rights than the welfare of society as a whole!

Please keep up the good work. Thank God for the FBI!

● The FBI uses "con men" and others with criminal records in such investigations because that is what it takes to catch the guilty. "Abscam was purposely sleazy so that no one would stick around it, except someone who wanted to deal with sleazy people," he said.

● Abscam did not set out to investigate members of Congress but instead began as an attempt to catch art thieves. As the inquiry developed, it moved into other areas and congressmen walked into the net. "We did not select any congressmen," Webster said. "They were self-selected."

● Anyone who listens to the FBI tapes of meetings between public officials and undercover agents will learn the extent of the corruption.

"If you hear those tapes, you get some idea of how blatantly corrupt those discussions were. There wasn't anything coy about them."

● Through letters, the public has let the FBI know that it wants the bureau to continue investigating corruption in high places. "The message is: Don't let anybody stop you," Webster said.

In the Abscam probe, which resulted in the convictions of Democratic Sen. Harrison Williams of New Jersey, who resigned his seat March 11, six House members and 11 others, FBI agents posed as representatives of a fictitious Arab sheik who was willing to pay cash for legislative favors, including help in gaining permanent U.S. residency.

Webster said he had been "necessarily constrained" until now in discussing the extraordinary investigation. But with the completion of all the trials, and as House and Senate committees prepare for inquiries into the Abscam methods, he said he now felt free to talk about the probe.

Webster hotly rejected Cranston's contention that Abscam ran "totally out of control." He said the charge, which Cranston made during debate over Williams' proposed expulsion from the Senate, was leveled "in a moment of rhetoric and emotion ... unsubstantiated by the actual facts."

It was when he was asked whether the FBI would ever conduct another undercover investigation of congressmen that Webster said, "The answer is, we will always follow our leads."

Of the seven members of Congress, including Florida Rep. Richard Kelly, who were convicted of bribery and other Abscam crimes, one member, Democratic Rep. Michael Myers of Pennsylvania, was expelled. Williams and Democratic Rep. Raymond Lederer of Pennsylvania resigned under threat of expulsion and the others were defeated for re-election.

To Catch a Thief

FBI Director William H. Webster is on solid ground in his defense of the bureau's Abscam investigation which resulted in the conviction of seven members of Congress — one senator and six representatives — on bribery and other charges. The wonder of it is that Webster should feel compelled to make any defense at all.

That's the way it is, though, when dealing with the likes of Alan Cranston, liberal Democratic senator from California, and his ilk. Cranston has criticized the Abscam investigation as improper, charging that the federal law enforcers tried "to induce members of Congress to commit crimes."

On the face of it that is absurd, and the closer one looks at it the more ridiculous it becomes. As Webster makes clear, there was larceny in the hearts of those convicted.

Webster shot back at his critics by dismissing allegations that the Abscam investigation somehow entrapped innocent men. The FBI chief and former federal judge from St. Louis offered point-by-point replies to criticism of Abscam. In rapid-fire order, he said that:

— The FBI uses "con men" and others with criminal records in such investigations because that is what it takes to catch the guilty. "Abscam was purposely sleazy so that no one would stick around it except someone who wanted to deal with sleazy people."

— Abscam did not set out to investigate members of Congress, but instead began as an attempt to catch art thieves. As the inquiry developed, it moved into other areas and congressmen and a senator walked into the net. "We did not select any congressmen. They were self-selected. They found their way to us."

— Anyone who listens to the FBI tapes of meetings between public officials and undercover agents will learn the extent of their corruption. "If you hear those tapes, you get some idea of how blatantly corrupt those discussions were. There wasn't anything coy about them."

Webster concluded by saying that, through letters, the public has let the FBI know it wants the bureau to continue investigating corruption in high places. "The message is: Don't let anybody stop you," Webster said.

With firmness and occasionally some heat, Webster said that "we will always follow our leads." And he dismissed allegations that the investigation, which resulted in the conviction of seven congressmen on bribery and other charges, somehow trapped innocent men.

During a 90-minute interview in his office last week with two Los Angeles Times reporters, the FBI chief and former federal judge from St. Louis offered point-by-point replies to criticism of Abscam by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and others.

In rapid-fire order, he said that:

Webster said he had been "necessarily constrained" until now in discussing the extraordinary investigation.

But with the completion of virtually all trials, and as House and Senate committees prepare for inquiries into the methods used in Abscam, he said he felt free to talk about how the bureau managed the investigation.

Dear Mr. Webster;

My sincere congratulations for your Abscam operation that proved it was needed and it was very successful.

Ever since writer, Mr. Lloyd Shearer broke the story in his "INTELLIGENCE REPORT" in Parade Mag. about our Congressmen and Senators personal activities of corruption and fraud, we have needed such a service of our government to protect our country from these unscrupulous people who believe that they are beyond reproach.

One Senator from Calif. who has vocally criticized you and the whole Abscam operation, for discovering that one of his good friends of the Senate, has corrupted himself because of you, should be watched very carefully. The statements that he has made to the Senate and to the press, in the defense of his corrupted colleague, leads me to believe that this Senator has been around an environment that no longer allow him to distinguish from right or wrong. I'm sure he knew it before he was elected to the Senate or became a politician.

Their is one fact that I have learned about Congressmen and Senators. They will always protect their own. And they will always hush up a scandle within their ranks, no matter how illegal it is. It's their silent code among themselves. Just like the Con's in San Quentin and the rest of our prisons.

ALL THE TAINTED GUILTY, THE SOOTH SAYERS, WILL DISSEMBLE + WRING THEIR HANDS. BUT I ALWAYS THOUGHT THE WAY YOU CATCH A CROOK IS WITH A CROOK. I'M SURE THIS IS THE WAY PEOPLE CONCEIVE IT.

AND, IN OUR LIVES WE CONCEIVE OF THE FBI AS THE ONE TO DO IT. WHO, OR WHAT ELSE, AS WE LEARNED FROM KIDS - THE BAD BOYS + THE GOOD BOYS.

ONE CAN GO ON + EQUITATE ON THE WORRIES OF THE POLICE STATE, FOREVER. IT ENDS UP WITHOUT ANYBODY DOING ANYTHING. 63-17561-447

I WOULD SAY, ONWARD WITH ABSCAM AND NOT LIMIT IT TO THE CONGRESS BUT (AS I THOUGHT I READ) ALL AROUND THE COUNTRY TO CATCH THESE GREEDY HYPOCRITES.

Dear Mr. Webster:

I recently read your response to criticism of the F.B.I. activities in the Abscam investigations. You mentioned in your response that through letters the public has let you know that they approved of the investigations and that they want you to continue to investigate corruption in high places.

I want you to know that my family and I completely support your investigations, and want you to continue them. Your response was superb, you are right on target. Keep up the good work.

We also want to thank you and your agency for your dedication and duty to our country under sometimes very difficult and dangerous circumstances.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Sir, PUBLIC Response Re. Abasco -

I strongly endorse your directives to your agents re "Abasco"

These degenerate, crooked, public elected officials no matter their rank or title should be punished harshly for their conduct in office. The use of the powers of office for misuse and self-enrichment and aid + comfort to these evil and nefarious organized criminals cannot be punished harshly enough. I endorse public
